Eligibility factors: job responsibilities, team requirements, manager approval, performance, client requirements, information-security requirements, and availability of suitable equipment and internet connectivity.

Non-eligible roles: Certain roles may require regular office attendance because of operational, client, security or business requirements.

Approval: Eligibility does not automatically mean an employee can work remotely on every day; the applicable work arrangement and manager requirements must be followed.

4. Types of Work Arrangements

Fully Remote: Employee performs duties primarily from an approved remote location.

Hybrid: Employee divides working time between the office and an approved remote location according to team requirements.

Temporary Remote Work: Employee works remotely for a limited period after appropriate approval.

5. Standard Working Hours

Regular schedule: Monday to Friday, 9:30 AM to 6:30 PM IST.

Lunch break: 1:00 PM to 2:00 PM.

Core collaboration hours: 11:00 AM to 4:00 PM IST.

International teams may use different schedules. Employees must follow the schedule communicated by their manager or project.

6. Attendance and Availability

Employees must begin work at their scheduled time and remain available during agreed working hours.

Employees must attend required meetings, keep calendars updated and record attendance using the approved HR system.

Unexpected absence, significant delay or inability to work should be communicated to the manager as soon as reasonably possible.

Being online in a chat application alone does not establish that an employee is actively working.

7. Leave and Absence

Employees must submit planned leave through the company's approved HR system.

Leave categories: Casual Leave, Sick Leave, Earned/Annual Leave, Public Holidays, Maternity/Paternity Leave, Bereavement Leave and other applicable statutory leave.

Planned leave should be requested in advance. Emergency or sick leave should be reported as soon as reasonably possible.

Leave approval depends on applicable company policy, staffing requirements and applicable law.

8. Remote Workspace Requirements

Employees must maintain a reasonably suitable workspace for performing their duties.

The workspace should have reliable internet, appropriate lighting, reasonable privacy and a suitable desk/chair setup.

Employees should take reasonable precautions so unauthorized persons cannot view confidential company information.

9. Company Equipment

Depending on role, the company may provide laptops, monitors, peripherals, headsets, software and security tools.

Company equipment remains company property.

Employees must protect equipment, use reasonable care, install only approved software, report loss/theft/damage promptly and return equipment when requested or when employment ends.

10. Information Security

Employees must use strong passwords and multi-factor authentication where required.

Employees must lock devices when unattended and keep operating systems and security software updated.

Employees must never share company credentials with other people.

Confidential company information must not be stored on personal devices unless specifically authorized.

Suspected security incidents must be reported immediately through the approved security/IT reporting channel.

11. Network and VPN Security

Employees may be required to use the company's VPN or another approved secure connection when accessing internal resources.

Employees should avoid accessing sensitive company resources through unsecured public Wi-Fi.

If public Wi-Fi is necessary, employees must follow the company's approved security procedures.

12. Data Privacy and Confidentiality

Confidential information includes customer information, employee records, business plans, source code, credentials, financial information, contracts, internal documentation and proprietary technology.

Employees must access confidential information only for legitimate work purposes and must not disclose it to unauthorized persons.

Confidentiality obligations continue after employment ends where applicable.

13. Acceptable Technology Use

Company systems and devices are primarily for legitimate business purposes.

Employees must not attempt unauthorized access, install malicious software, share credentials, disable security controls without authorization, copy confidential information for unauthorized purposes, or use company systems for unlawful activities.

14. Communication and Meetings

Employees must use approved communication tools for work.

Important messages should receive a response within a reasonable working timeframe.

Employees must attend relevant meetings, join on time, communicate conflicts and keep project communication in appropriate channels.

Official channels: Email for formal notices; team chat for daily communication; video meetings for collaboration; project-management systems for tasks; HR portal for HR transactions.

15. Performance Expectations

Remote employees are evaluated on responsibilities, performance and results rather than physical presence.

Relevant factors may include quality of work, timely completion, project contribution, communication, collaboration, customer feedback, achievement of agreed objectives and professional conduct.

Remote status does not reduce normal performance expectations.

16. Overtime and Additional Work

Employees should not routinely work beyond scheduled hours unless required and approved under company procedures.

Where overtime is applicable, it will be handled according to company policy and applicable employment laws.

17. Expense Reimbursement

Approved business expenses may be reimbursed when supported by appropriate documentation and submitted through the company's expense process.

Examples include approved business travel, client-related expenses, authorized equipment and approved software.

Personal household expenses are generally not reimbursable unless specifically approved.

18. Working From Another City or Country

Employees should normally work from their approved location.

Temporary work from another city, state or country requires approval before the arrangement begins.

Requests may be reviewed for tax, employment-law, data-security, client, working-hour and business considerations.

Working from another country may require additional approvals.

19. Employee Conduct

Employees must maintain professional conduct while working remotely.

Harassment, discrimination, bullying, threatening behavior, retaliation, workplace violence and unauthorized disclosure of confidential information are prohibited.

Concerns should be reported through HR or another authorized reporting channel.

20. Equal Opportunity

Nexora Technologies provides equal employment opportunities consistent with applicable law.

Employment decisions should be based on legitimate job-related factors such as qualifications, skills, experience, performance and business requirements.

21. Conflict of Interest and Outside Work

Employees must disclose actual or potential conflicts between personal interests and company responsibilities.

Employees must not use company information, resources or relationships for unauthorized personal benefit.

Outside employment or freelance work may require approval if it could create a conflict, affect performance or involve confidential company information.

22. Intellectual Property

Work product created as part of employment may belong to the company where provided by applicable agreements and law.

Examples include software, source code, documentation, designs, algorithms, business processes and technical research.

23. Grievances and HR Support

Employees may contact their manager or HR regarding workplace concerns.

Concerns may include workplace conduct, compensation, leave, working conditions, harassment, discrimination, policy violations or management concerns.

HR will handle concerns through appropriate internal procedures.

24. Policy Exceptions

Exceptions to this policy require appropriate authorization from the responsible manager and/or HR, depending on the issue.

An employee should not assume that a previous exception automatically applies to future situations.

Where a legal or regulatory requirement conflicts with this policy, the applicable legal requirement will govern.

25. Policy Violations

Failure to comply with policy may result in corrective or disciplinary action depending on the seriousness and circumstances.

Possible actions include counseling, written warning, performance improvement measures, suspension where applicable, or termination where justified.

Actions will be handled according to company policy, employment agreements and applicable law.

26. Remote Work Review

The company may periodically review remote-work arrangements based on business requirements, role requirements, performance, security, client requirements or organizational changes.

Significant changes to an employee's working arrangement will be communicated through appropriate channels.

27. Employee Support Agent — Retrieval Rules

Answer from policy first: When an employee question is directly answered by this document, use the applicable rule and avoid inventing additional requirements.

Use the most specific section: For questions about working hours, use Section 5; for attendance, Section 6; for leave, Section 7; for equipment, Section 9; for security, Sections 10–11.

Escalate uncertainty: If the document does not specify an answer, state that the policy does not specify the requested detail and direct the employee to HR or the responsible manager.

Do not infer approval: Eligibility for remote work does not itself constitute approval for a particular remote schedule, location or exception.

Preserve conditions: Answers should retain qualifiers such as 'where required', 'where applicable', 'subject to approval' and 'depending on role'.
